

One of the refrains I've heard from you these past few weeks is "won't it be wonderful when we all get back together?" Amen to that. I am writing this on Thursday night. By the time you read it on Sunday, plans will have changed. I watched the governor's press conference. I read the "Ad Astra" reopening plan. There are many questions still to be answered.

We are trying to prepare for every possibility that may arise. Please stay tuned. Check your email often. We will give you information as soon as we can finalize it. And we know there will be flaws in the system. We will adjust accordingly. We love you and want to love you the best way possible. Our regathering will be gradual. But it will be so sweet. And the day will come when we can all get together at the same time.

God is up to something. Many are claiming to know exactly what that is. I'm glad they know because I don't. I do believe that it is for our spiritual good. That's what I want to preach about Sunday. I'll be in a familiar passage in Acts 2. The premise of the sermon is this: There are things that only God can do.

There will never be another Pentecost. But we never want to limit God by a lack of faith. We live by faith, not by sight. And there are things only God can do. And I'm praying in faith that He will do great things in your life. And in the life of our church. Our community. And even our nation.

I hope you and your loved ones are blessed these days. While exercising today, I was listening to a podcast. The host said, "We don't know what the future holds." Yes, we do. The future is good for those who are His. So rest well today. Enrich yourself in His Word. God bless you!
